CATARRH

COLD IN HEAD

A SONG OF THE EVERYDAYS.

Come, sing me a song in the tongue I know.
I am tired of the stilted strain,
The worn old rut where the fancies strut
In a meaningless, tangled chain.
I am weary of flights with the far off gods,
That only the wise may praise.
I want the mirth and the tears of earth,
A song of the everydays.

A song to lighten the lives of those
Whom labor has called its own,
A note to beat as an echo sweet
Of the world that each has known,
A breeze from the mountain's craggy peak,
A whiff from the woodland ways,
A fleck of foam from the beach at home,
A song of the everydays.

A blossom plucked from the hawthorn hedge,
A leaf from the bough above,
A ribbon rare or a tress of hair,
A kiss from the lips of love.
A mother's step on a chamber floor,
The catch of a childish phrase,
A grass grown sod and a prayer to God,
A song of the everydays.

Oh, sing me a song of the fields and hills,
A song of the sea and land,
That shall ring again in the hearts of men
And the least shall understand.
No hint of the scholar's classic lore
Or the cynic's bitter lays,
But a song to rest in a peasant's breast—
A song of the everydays.
—Joe Lincoln in L. A. W. Bulletin.

A SIGNATURE.

It was about 15 days ago, at the country home of Brignac, on one of those exquisite afternoons when, although one shivers at the thought of the approaching autumn, the sun throws here and there mild though already paler rays.

While awaiting the hour for taking up the nets in the pretty bend of the Marne, a river which loiters indolently along the meadows, winding like a great silver snake, we were talking on the wide veranda, which was filled with the heavy, intoxicating odor of heliotropes.

A charming man is Brignac. Formerly an officer in the light cavalry, he is a man of majestic chest, large face, a trifle too flushed, with an immense white beard and square features. Born at that period when the empire was at its height, he had taken pleasure as it came to him, and it must be said that the advent of the republic seemed to him an insufficient reason for renouncing the pleasures of this world. He amused himself under M. Thiers, under MacMahon and even under M. Grevy. It was only seven years ago that the gout thought best to interfere. Brignac was then—but why disclose the age of a gallant man whose friendship is true and whose cook is without equal? He was advised to try the baths. It was there, near a spring, whence bubbled up a hot liquid which smelled like a bad egg, that he met a young English girl, straight and slender as a pretty bamboo stalk. He had still a gallant air and quite a fortune, she very little. The next winter the pretty English woman married the former cavalry officer. They have one child. They are happy.

Only, Brignac has aged a great deal and has become horribly serious. He is a good comrade for me. He gave me when I was very young that practical advice which is never forgotten, and I am happy from time to time to be with him—for an hour or two.

While talking, as we passed by a little room opening on the conservatory, I saw in the corner of the room, soberly seated before a table, my host's son, Gaston, a pretty, dark child. He had let his pen roll across the table, and with a glance that seemed to me full of melancholy he followed the rustling flight of the swallows that were skimming close to the lawn, flying through the swarms of gnats.

On such a beautiful day, in this room, which, in contrast to the sunny veranda, seemed more gloomy than a dungeon in the palace of the doges, the sight of this child prisoner gave me pain, and I could not refrain from saying to my friend:

"How have you the heart to shut up this child at such a time?" And Brignac answered:

"My dear friend, when he knows how to write I will leave him alone, for he is not yet 5 years old and very intelligent; but he must learn to write, and write well, I mean."

"That is without doubt because your own handwriting is like cat scratches."

"That might indeed be a reason. We should endeavor to help our children to avoid such of our faults as have troubled us in our own career—and besides"—

"My dear Brignac, I do not know whether it is because you live too much in the country, but it seems to me that you are becoming very much of a Prudhomme."

He interrupted me with some spirit:

"Perhaps I am like Prudhomme. Prudhomme was an individual who paddled his own canoe very well; besides—Do you wish me to tell you why I am so anxious that my little scamp should write well?

"It is a story of that time when you would not have called me Prudhomme. It was a long time ago, in 1863. At that time Baden-Baden was Baden-Baden, and Monte Carlo nothing but a little fishing village. Every one who was in the swim or considered himself so hurried to Baden-Baden as soon as July came around. At that time the clubrooms were empty—not more so than now, during the week of the races at Deauville. That year I had remained at Paris, where, in my little suit on a ground floor in the Rue Taitbout, I had not been so frightfully dull, when one morning a letter was brought to me. The letter was a demand for money—not one of those vulgar, begging letters, heaping upon one recitals of ill luck, swearing eternal gratitude and everlasting devotion. No, it was short and to the point, without any beating about the bush.

"'I have not a single sou. Send me immediately 1,000 francs that I may pay my hotel bill and return to France to enlist.'

"This letter, horribly scrawled, was dated from Baden-Baden. As to the signature, it was impossible to read it.

"I made every attempt, examining it letter by letter, searching among my papers for the name of the person who could have been guilty of this vile scrawl. It was absolutely impossible to discover any clew which would put me on the right track. At Baden-Baden? I had 300 friends at Baden-Baden. But this unlucky name—still, I must find out what it was. For two days I did nothing but turn it over in my mind, seeking the solution, giving every one whom I met this signature to decipher. Absolutely useless. Each person gave a different opinion.

"You can imagine into what a fever this had thrown me. At the time I was full of a great many notions. I imagined that to refuse money to a friend was meanness. We are all simpletons when young. But what caused me the greatest annoyance was the thought that perhaps this note was from some one for whom I entertained a real friendship.

"I telegraphed to 10 or 12 intimate friends. None was the author of the note. Then I betook myself to experts in chirography. One said the name was Casernier—had no doubt of it, was willing to swear to it. The second said that he challenged any one to read the name otherwise than Sutinais and was willing to swear to that name, and finally a third declared it was not a name at all, but a word. In his opinion it was 'Civilities.'

"Sutinais and Casernier were alike unknown to me. I turned over the club directories. I again reviewed my book of addresses, name by name. Nothing. I could discover nothing. I was almost crazy, you may imagine, and I had even lost sight, to some extent, of the original reason for all this trouble, thinking less now of obliging a friend than of discovering this name so carefully concealed.

"On the third day an inspiration came to me, so simple that it had occurred to me only after all the other attempts had failed. I wrote to Baden-Baden for a list of the Frenchmen staying at the hotel of the unfortunate scribbler. I would need only to write to all whom I knew in the place. This calmed me. And, in truth, I needed it, for I had conceived an inexplicable rage against all this, as if something mysterious and fatal pursued me.

"I retired early on the evening of the third day and soon fell asleep.

"I ought to tell you that I then had—I still have, in fact—the habit of using a night lamp. I cannot bear to feel myself in total darkness for an instant.

"That night—it is truly a singular thing, and I have never been able to think of it without a strange sensation—that night I was awakened by a sharp cracking sound in the great silence. I have never known what that noise was—doubtless the night lamp going out, for it was perfectly dark. At first a feeling of awful anguish oppressed me, a feeling I always have when in the dark, and before I had time to fully awaken I heard—yes, my friend, I actually heard—the effect of nervousness, you say?—it matters not—I heard a voice, which whispered very low, 'Jacques Lerminier.'

"A cold shiver ran through my whole body, though I saw no reason for it. In a second I had risen, lighted a candle and reread the letter from Baden-Baden. Why had I not deciphered it before? It was perfectly plain.

"Lerminier was a refined boy, obliging, but a little wild, whom I had loved much when we were young together, soon lost from sight, then found again in those momentary encounters where a rapid clasp of the hand and an earnest 'Do you remember?' is all, and then separation, perhaps for years.

"Poor Jacques! That is what we always called him at the school of St. Cyr.

"He should certainly have had his 1,000 francs.

"I looked at the clock. It was past midnight. Nothing could be done until morning. Immediately I wrote a letter to Baden-Baden, excusing myself, explaining all. I placed the money in it and sealed it. And while I did this I remembered that the whisper which I had heard erewhile was exactly like the voice of Jacques when deeply moved.

"How strange is the work of memory in our brains, I said to myself, and how was it possible for me to recall at the same time and while yet asleep the name and the voice of 'poor Jacques.'

"Then I went back to bed again, satisfied and calm. I did not dream any more of the whispering voice in the blackness of my silent chamber. No, indeed. I thought no more of it until two days later, when I received a dispatch from Baden-Baden. My registered letter had been remailed to me.

"'Poor Jacques' had killed himself at midnight two days before, at the moment when my sleep was interrupted by a sharp crack—that sharp crack like the report of a pistol."

Brignac coughed slightly to clear his throat.

"I positively insist that my child shall write a legible hand," he said, with a sad smile.—From the French For Short Stories.

Seth Bryant,

Seth Bryant, who has just died at his home in Ashmont, Mass., at the age of 97 years, was the oldest and best known Democrat in Massachusetts, having been a delegate to all the recent conventions of the party. "He loved," says the Springfield Republican, "to occupy a front seat on the platform and with his silver ear trumpet turned toward each speaker eagerly absorb the party doctrines upon which he had acted since Jackson's time. During the war he did a large business with the government and first suggested that each manufacturer be compelled to put his name on all shoes sold to the government."—New York Tribune.

ARITHMETIC 1700 B. C.

Sums Over Which Egyptian Children Puzzled Their Brains.

Probably the oldest copy book for home lessons in arithmetic was recently unearthed in Egypt. The papyrus, which was found in excellent condition, dates from the period about 1700 B. C.—that is, about 100 years before the time of Moses, or almost 3,600 years ago. It proves that the Egyptians had a thorough knowledge of elementary mathematics almost to the extent of our own. The papyrus has a long heading, "Direction how to attain the knowledge of all dark things," etc. Numerous examples show that their principal operations with entire units and fractions were made by means of addition and multiplication. Subtractions and divisions were not known in their present form, but correct results were obtained nevertheless.

Equations are also found in the papyrus. Among the examples given is this one: Ten measures of barley are to be divided among ten persons in such a manner that each subsequent person receives one-eighth of a measure less than the one before him. Another example given is: There are seven men, each one has seven cats, each cat has eaten seven mice, each mouse has eaten seven grains of barley. Each grain of barley would, if cultivated, have yielded seven measures of barley. How much barley has been lost in that way? The papyrus also contains calculations of area, the calculation of the area of a circle and its transformation into a square, and finally calculations of the cubic measurements of pyramids.—Philadelphia Record.

Shaking Hands.

Men shake hands with strangers of their own sex with far greater readiness than do women. Two men, on being presented to one another, will frequently extend the hand in a grasp of greeting, which gives opportunity to form a general idea of each other's make up, and know whether they are attracted or repulsed. Occasionally there is a man with sufficient good nature and courage to refuse another man's hand without causing offense. There are men who have been so impressed with the discoveries of bacteriology that they maintain handshaking to be the cause of dissemination of disease germs. The bare hand comes in contact with innumerable germs looking for pasturage on some vulnerable spot of our anatomy. A cut or abrasion on the hand leaves a door open for the admission of the enemy. Therefore it is with reason that men argue against promiscuous handshaking out of the home among the men met in business life. Science long ago frowned upon the practice of promiscuous kissing, which prevailed among women. Is the ungloved handshake also doomed?—New York Ledger.

Great Rat Catchers.

According to an account in The Journal d'Hygiene, rats have become so abundant in Brazil that a domestic snake, the giboya, which has about the circumference of the arm, is sold in the market place in Rio Janeiro, to be kept in the house as a protection against rodents. It would seem that the serpent pursues its prey more for the pleasure that there is in it than from a sense of hunger, since it is said it rarely eats the rats caught. Similar in its habits and attachments to the domestic cat of our more northern latitudes, the giboya will, it is said, find its way back to the house of its master even if transported to a considerable distance.

The seal worn by the pope and used by him on official documents to which his signature is attached has on it the engraving of a fish, with the cipher of the wearer. Since the thirteenth century every pope has worn a ring of this character, and it is shattered with a hammer when the wearer dies to prevent its use on a forged document.

Snow Balling.

About the young woman in ten nowadays would dare to run out bare headed and bare handed and frolic and snow ball in midwinter. They have to be muffled up like hot-house flowers before they dare venture out in severe weather, and even then would shudder at the thought of rollicking in the snow as their grandmothers did.

The trouble lies in the fact that too few women enjoy perfect health and strength of the special womanly organism. A woman who is not well and strong locally cannot enjoy good general health. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures all weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood. It is the most perfect and scientific remedy ever devised for the peculiar ailments of women. It restores womanly power, strength and virility. It tones and builds up the nerves which have been shattered by suffering and disease. It corrects all irregularities and derangements and stops exhausting drains. It restores weak, nervous invalids to perfect health. It is intended for this one class of disorders and is good for no other. It is the discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. No other known medicine can take its place.

"I have been troubled with female weakness that my physician called catarrh of the womb," writes Miss Pean Conner, of Catfish, Clarion Co., Pa. "I doctored for it and did not get better. At last I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I got better right along and when I had taken four bottles was cured. I recommended the 'Favorite Prescription' to a friend of mine. She has been using it and thinks it is wonderful."

Constipation is a little illness that if neglected builds a big one. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe.

The hay crop on the Rose, Whitney and other farms in the vicinity of Reclamation will be immense this season.

UPHOLD THE WAR,

Now already, scarcely six weeks since the declaration of war and in spite of the distinct and decided utterances of Congress with regard to the purpose of intervention, certain parties and papers are beginning to cry down and belittle the motives and impulses influencing us to intervene on behalf of the suffering Cubans and to take steps to stop the inhuman colonial policy pursued by Spain.

From the day intervention was authorized our motives have been disparaged and scorned by the press of the German nation. This may have been excused in a nation whose system of government is so foreign to the freedom of our liberal institutions. Still it has not been excused. It has aroused in this country a storm of protest and censure. It has stirred the German-American citizen to come forward and declare in terms unmistakable his deprecation of such criticism, his allegiance to this country and his firm belief in the justice and humanity of this war. Both the pulpit and press of our nation have uniformly taken up the cause of intervention and defended the nation against this false and unfriendly foreign comment.

But now that the Government has seen fit to take and hold the Philippines; now that there has been some delay—and a necessary delay it is—in getting troops into Cuba some newspapers, and among them one supposed to represent the most cultured thought and the finest feelings of our State, have seen fit to declare the "cause of humanity" a falsehood, a deceit, a hyprocisy; have seen fit to say that this is a war for revenge which is developing into a war for territorial aggrandizement. Such accusations as these—such construction of the present policy of the Government—are as ridiculous and contemptible as is the action of the "Peace Society" in Philadelphia in passing resolutions disapproving the war and expressing sympathy for the Queen Regent of Spain. These statements, however, are worse than ridiculous and contemptible. They are traitorous to the intents and purposes of the high-minded men directing the destiny of this nation. They are an insult to the humane Christian spirit of the American people; they are falsehoods and like all falsehoods fraught with evil. They are dangerous falsehoods, for they appeal to a certain class who, not having breadth of mind and greatness of soul to appreciate a pure purpose or applaud a high endeavor, delight in ascribing actions and events to causes commensurate with their own littleness and inferiority.

It is true that the sailors shout "Remember the Maine" as they steam on midst shot and shell to victory; it is true that the Government is holding and will probably continue to hold the Philippines; it is true that the reconcentrados are still suffering, still starving and yet no soldier has set foot in Cuba to relieve their intolerable distress. Such truths, however, are not sufficient to support such mendacious motives as some ascribe to us, or such malignant misconstruction of the policy of the Government.

Let the sailor cry "Remember the Maine." It does not signify that this is a war of revenge. It is a battle cry; a battle cry excited by the most atrocious act known to the annals of civilization, an act, which has never been repudiated by the Spanish government, an act which we endured patiently for weeks, an act which while it has not excited this war, and which in itself would probably never have excited war, still is cumulative evidence to show Spain's unfitness and inability to longer rule her provinces in a humane manner and to insure to the world peace and protection within the portals of her harbors.

Yes, "Remember the Maine," and remember her destruction as an act typical of a race against whose policy, inhumanity and cruelty, we have protested for twenty-five years. Let it be the battle cry. But the battle is not a battle for blood, for revenge, for selfish motives. It is a righteous war. A war against ignorance and pride, a war against cruelty and extortion, a war against a policy contrary and intolerable to the spirit of our free institutions. The motives inciting this war are humane and righteous. Its avowed purpose is humane and righteous. Let us remember this and scorn any one, who assigns motives less honorable, less worthy, as one who seeks to lower the standard of our morality and civilization.

A MOVEMENT is on foot to force Secretary of War Alger to resign and give place to a more capable man. Until this is done the Army and Navy will continue to be hampered by the vacillating policy of a man who in his prime would have been the right man in the right place, but who has now outlived his usefulness.

WAR NEWS

It now transpires that the report is incorrect and unofficial that Captain Sigsbee of the auxillery cruiser St. Paul has captured the Spanish warship Alfonso XIII, together with several hundred soldiers and a vast quantity of war supplies.

Commodore Schley and his fleet of warships attacked and reduced the fortifications guarding the entrance to the bay at Santiago, where the Spanish Admiral Cerveras is said to be bottled up.

General Miles, with an army of 70,000 soldiers, will commence the invasion of Cuba to-day.

General Merritt has arrived in San Francisco and will take charge of the military expedition to the Philippines.

Highwaymen on Wheels.

A wheelman of West 46th street, New York, was attacked, robbed and left senseless by two highwaymen mounted on bicycles in Central Park. Repeated accounts of robberies by men mounted upon wheels have appeared in the papers in various parts of the country. Those depredators of the health, diseases of the kidneys and bladder, will likewise escape arrest, and pursue their atrocious career unchecked, unless they are arrested by the potent intervention of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest diuretic, as well as tonic, known to modern times. It is at the start that disease is the more easily overcome. The use of the Bitters is followed by the happiest results in dyspepsia, liver complaint and nervousness.

Recent statistics show that the English citizen's heaviest bill after food, rent, clothing and drink is his gas bill. England pays $100,000,000 a year to the gas companies, and it is calculated that the gas companies realize a profit of $26,000,000 a year.

She Snubbed a Lord.

The New York "swagger" set received a breezy sensation recently when one of the choicest young heiresses on the Avenue married an American, who earns his own living; while on the same date went sailing homeward a distinguished little prince-ling whose yard-long title rumor said had been placed entirely at her disposal. "Bless me" exclaimed her self-made father

"THEY PELT HER UNMERCIFULLY."

facetiously, "If this sort of thing keeps on we'll all be Americanized!"

There is something about the air of this country which inclines our women to act independently. A girl may try to wrap up her womanly instincts beneath a cloak of fashionable vanity, but the little love gods find out the weak spots in her armor and pelt her unmercifully. If she is a true American the chances are after all that nine times in ten she will marry the man she cares for. The vast majority of our young women seek no greater blessing than to be well-loved wives of strong-hearted men; and mothers of healthy, happy children.

The natural burdens of wifehood and motherhood have been amazingly lightened in the last thirty years. Advanced science has found a way to overcome the physical weakness of women and make them strong and capable in performing their wifely and motherly duties.

THE MODERN WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

At the present day there is no need for any woman in this country to be weighed down and overburdened with physical weakness or disease. A woman suffering from any delicate ailment peculiar to her sex, no matter what the circumstances may be, may obtain such eminent professional advice and assistance as a queen could hardly command a generation ago. She can have all the advantages of that splendid American Institution, the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., with its staff of nearly twenty eminent specialists in the different branches of medical practice. At their head as chief consulting physician is Dr. R. V. Pierce, one of the most widely experienced physicians living. Any woman consulting him by mail and giving a careful statement of her case will receive sound professional advice and suggestion for home-treatment free of charge.

It is impossible to estimate the immense amount of suffering that weak and ailing women have been saved by Dr. Pierce's suggestions for home-treatment and the use of his matchless prescriptions. His "Favorite Prescription" has done more to promote the health and strength of women of our land than all other remedies combined. It is recognized throughout the world as the one greatest supportive tonic and special strengthener that has ever been devised for women.

It gives healing and power and endurance to the delicate special organism of women; imparts natural vitality and vigor to their entire nerve structure. It banishes abnormal and irregular conditions; stops unnatural drains; creates healthful capacity and stamina.

It prepares women for motherhood, carries them safely and comfortably through the ordeal; takes away all its dangers and nearly all its pain; promotes abundant, natural nourishment for the child and, through the favorable influence upon the mother, increases the little one's natural strength and hardihood.

Mrs. Betsey M. White, of Stoneycreek, Warren Co., N. Y., in a letter to Dr. Pierce says: "Your 'Favorite Prescription' has done wonders in our house. My son's wife had been for years a great sufferer; all broken down and very weak and nervous. She was troubled with all the pains and aches one so slender could endure. She took everything she heard of, hoping to get help, but in vain; so she tried Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it did wonders for her. The doctors said she could not live to have another child as she came near dying so many times. This spring she had a nice boy weighing eleven pounds; she got through before we could get any one there. I was afraid she would not live. We cried for joy when we saw how nicely she got along. May God bless you for the good you have done."

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

GENTLE SHOWERS.

Grapes, Corn and Potatoes Greatly Benefited—Little or no Damage to Hay and Cherries.

The gentle showers which fell at intervals throughout the valley on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, which for the time being greatly alarmed our farmers who had already commenced to cut their hay, it now transpires did little or no damage to the hay crop, while cherries escaped with slight injury. The precipitation, which was 0.27 inches, will insure fine crops of grapes, fruit, corn and potatoes. The rain was followed by slight breezes and a clear, crisp atmosphere which did much to prevent damage to the hay crop, which will be the best harvested in this valley for many years. The outlook for grapes was never better in June, and notwithstanding the carping of calamity howlers Sonoma Valley is all right.

The Electric Light Company.

The power house of the Sonoma Electric Light Company is rapidly nearing completion, but it will be several weeks before the engine and dynamo arrive from the East. There was a meeting of the directors last Tuesday and among other business transacted was the engaging of the services of Jeff. Thompson of Petaluma to superintend the erection and wiring of the poles. It is expected that the plant will be in running order by August 1st.

Death of P. J. Key in Texas.

P. J. Key, who purchased the Capt. Oliver place at Pioneer Grove a year or two ago and who sold out to L. H. Stark last January and returned to Texas to look out for his landed interests in the Lone Star State, is dead. A private dispatch states that his death was very sudden. He complained of feeling ill and two hours afterwards he breathed his last. The deceased, during his short stay in this valley, made many friends, who sincerely mourn his sudden taking off.

School Election.

The election for School Trustees in this place yesterday resulted in the re-election of Fred'k T. Duhring for High School Trustee and Granville S. Harris for District School Trustee. There was no opposition to speak of and both gentlemen were practically the unanimous choice of the friends and patrons of both schools.

Examination for Cadets.

R. M. Swain, Prof. C. H. Nielsen and Prof. A. C. McMeans have been named by Congressman Barham to conduct the next examination of applicants for appointment as cadet at West Point from this district. The examination will probably be held some time in June.

Off for Germany.

Otto Wagner left last Saturday for Germany, where he will visit his parents, whom he has not seen for fifteen years. Mrs. Wagner and her little son during her husband's absence will continue to reside at "Green Oaks," the home of her father, T. S. Glaister. Mr. Wagner expects to return home the latter part of August.

LOST AT SEA.

Beaurie Spencer, With Thirty-Seven Other Unfortunates, Wrecked at Sea and Drowned.

Beaurie Spencer, and everybody in Sonoma Valley knew the genial, jovial, smiling Beaurie, is no more. He found a grave in the waters of the Pacific Ocean off Cape Flattery on Sunday morning, May 22nd. Together with sixty other adventurous spirits he sailed on the schooner Jane Gray, several weeks ago, bound for the Alaska gold fields.

Beaurie Spencer was born and raised on "Willow Farm" in this valley. Several years ago he removed to San Francisco and entered upon the practice of the law. Beaurie had many friends in Sonoma county, who were greatly shocked at his untimely end. He was the brother of Mrs. G. S. Harris of this place, Mrs. Geo. Hooper, Dr. Alf McLaughlin and Geo. W. Spencer of San Francisco. He was aged 35 years and unmarried.

His remains will probably never be recovered, as the schooner went down in 270 fathoms of water.

R. Cantoni has purchased the City Bakery from J. B. Barbarin, who has been forced to retire from business owing to failing health.

Jo. Toroni and the Weyl Bros. killed thirty-two rabbits on Friday of last week on the Weyl ranch near Healdsburg, and the boys say it was not a good day for rabbits either.

Dr. D. G. Atwood, who has practiced dentistry in this place for the past five years, has sold his business to Dr. H. Gottenberg. Dr. Atwood and his mother will shortly leave Sonoma for the East.

Memorial Day was duly observed in this place by the raising of flags at half-mast. There was no public demonstration, but a number of graves of ex-soldiers in Mountain Cemetery were strewn with flowers.

The Sonoma County Horticultural Society will shortly make an exhibit of the products of our farms and orchards in Santa Rosa. A committee of twenty-one has been appointed to make the necessary arrangements. Hon. Robt. Howe of Eden Dale will represent Sonoma Valley on the committee.

A decision in the contest over the remains of the late Senator Enos is expected any day. The matter is now before the Supreme Court, where it was transferred from the Superior Court. The remains of the dead Senator still repose in the receiving vault in Mountain Cemetery, where they were placed by the widow, Mrs. Susie Enos, by order of Superior Judge Burnett, pending a decision in the case, which is one of the most peculiar ever submitted to our courts.

In our advertising columns will be found an announcement of Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls' forthcoming book, entitled "America's War For Humanity." Canvassing agents will find in it a book of remarkable interest, and certainly of extraordinary salability. The history of the war is told in pictures and story, and in a way that always characterizes the brilliant pen of Senator Ingalls. In narrating the incidents of this war he finds grand scope for his superb descriptive and analytical powers. The theme is worthy of the author, and the author is worthy of the theme. It is published by D. N. Thompson Publishing Co., of St. Louis, Mo. It will be a monumental work that will not only be read everywhere, but it will be a monument to his genius that will outlive in history his brilliant senatorial career. The subscription book trade and the canvassing agent are fortunate in the fact that an author of such rare ability has been enlisted in its interest.

School Moneys.

County Superintendent Neilsen has made the following apportionments of school moneys to Sonoma Valley schools: Sonoma, $368; San Luis, $86.40; Watmaugh, $66.80; Summit Joint, $33.85; Los Guilicos, $85; Enterprise, $51.20; Huichica, $51.20; Harvey, $71; Glen Ellen, $79.40.

Davis, Secretary of the Regents of the State University, will deliver an address, diplomas will be presented to the graduates by Hon. Robt. Howe, President of the Board of Trustees of the High School and essays will be read by the following graduates: Mabel Thomas, Kate Morris and Wm. Chase. Short addresses will be delivered by Principal Weed, Vice-Principal Sims and Vernon Goodwin, Principal of the Sonoma Grammar School.

CITY TRUSTEES.

The Water Question Still in the Hands of a Special Committee—Other Matters.

At a regular meeting of the City Trustees, held last Wednesday evening, every member was present.

The Water Committee, composed of Trustees Hartin, Seipp and Harris, reported an additional offer to sell the city an artesian well. The proposition came from A. Caminata, who offers his property on First-street West, on which the well is located, for $1400. The committee, which is endeavoring to secure an option on the Vallejo system, asked for further time in which to make their final report, which will probably be presented at the next meeting of the Board.

The matter of granting a franchise to the so called Sonoma Water Company was laid over until the next meeting. During a discussion among the members and a representative of the parties who have applied for the franchise the talk developed the fact that the company placed a valuation of $6000 on the artesian wells of Messrs. Schocken, Weyl, Aguillon and Poppe.

The Street Committee reported having ordered necessary repairs to two bridges.

The following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

Howard Munfrey, labor	$ 7.35
E. J. Robin, salary, etc	17.50
B. L. Cook, street sprinkling	19.60
John Stademan, labor	5.00

The Board then adjourned.

The entertainment given by the Presentation Convent at Union Hall Tuesday evening was well attended and in every way a great success. The programme was excellent. Never before have school children shown such careful training and such marked talent. The drills were especially good. Tiny tots hardly out of the nursery drilled like veterans and went through intricate figures with little more concern than if walking home from school. The musical element in the programme predominated and much praise is due to the youthful performers and their conscientious teachers. The versatility of the little players was shown by their clever rendition of the comedies "Aunt Maxwell's Return" and "The Train to Mauro." The entire production was up to the standard and the results of the performance is a credit to teachers and pupils and should be highly gratifying to them.

The affair was a most brilliant one and was attended by 200 invited guests. The bride, a charming brunette gowned in white mousselin de soie over silk, four bridesmaids in pink and blue, a maid of honor, the groom and best man made up the wedding party. After the ceremony congratulations were received and the guests sat down to a champagne supper. The presents received by the happy young couple were costly and numerous.

The cotillion and assembly at Union Hall last Friday evening was a bright and jolly affair. The merry gathering of young people, the artistic decoration of the hall, the good music and charming chaperones all combined to make it smart. On one side of the hall the foliage of the live oak tree mingled with sprays of roses and on the other oaks half concealed tiny flags. Over all the doors large American flags were artistically draped and in every corner was arranged an inviting nook or cozy corner for tete-a-tete between dances. The assembly lasted until 10 o'clock, when the cotillion, led by H. Appleton, Jr., and Miss Doris Clewe, was inaugurated. Vernon Goodwin directed and arranged the figures. They were designs full of effervescence and novelty. Newburg & Smith furnished music. The merry-makers continued their revelry until 1 o'clock, when adieus were said. Among those present were Misses. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE OLD SONG.

There is a garden sweet with rose and pink
Where honeysuckle grows and virgin's bower,
Soft turfed and shelving to the river's brink,
And in that garden grows my heart's white flower.

She moves about it like a living rose,
And from my boat as I come up the stream
I see, mid all the flowers her garden grows,
The living lily of her garments gleam.

At night I walk beside the darkling tide
Where the drowned stars among the lilies stir,
See her bright window on the farther side
And bless the happy roof that shelters her.

And when I touch that fair, enchanted land
Among the roses in the sunlit noon
She comes to me and takes me by the hand,
And life's a song and love, true love, the tune.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE LEAD SOLDIER.

It was a little before the revolution. At Brienne, attending the military school, was a young man who amused himself in the evenings by drilling lead foot soldiers. Everybody laughed at him, but, regardless of their mockery, he took great delight in reviewing his soldiers when ready for battle, and, radiant, led them to imaginary victories.

His schoolmates called him fool and enthusiast. He listened to them with his large, dreamy eyes opened wide, and, smiling, continued to direct his diminutive army.

This was his sole enjoyment. More earnest than the others, he worked all day, even during the hour of recreation. When evening came, as recreation he took the little soldiers from their boxes, and, talking to them as he would to human beings, he reviewed them.

One evening, after having worked harder than usual, the young man sat listlessly drilling his soldiers. He was evidently tired. As he leaned on the table he saw one of his lead soldiers turn toward a comrade and say these words:

"It seems to me that the emperor is very tired tonight."

The young man started. He rubbed his eyes, believing it to be a dream; but no, he was wide awake.

"This is," thought he, "a hallucination."

And he put his soldiers, one by one, into their boxes.

When the boxes were closed, he made his way to his bed. He was about to retire when he heard behind him a tiny voice murmur:

"The emperor is very tired tonight."

He turned around, but saw he was alone.

Vaguely frightened he said the three words:

"Who has spoken?"

"I," murmured a little voice.

"Who are you?"

"I have no name. I am a very little lead soldier."

The frightened young man looked at the boxes of soldiers scattered about on the table and distinctly saw that one of the covers was moving.

He approached the table and spied one of the soldiers standing upright on a comrade and looking at him as he made a military bow. Then the young fellow threw himself on his bed, wishing to see or hear no more. He thought he was going crazy.

A few years later this young man was made captain of the artillery.

At Toulon he fought the English, distinguishing himself as one of the bravest, astonishing his troops by his daring and his science, amazing his superiors by his courage and his unfailing designs. After several weeks Toulon was taken. The victorious army entered the city, and for the first time since the campaign the young captain fell into a deep sleep.

He who always slept armed, he who awakened at the slightest noise, slept like this? It was because he knew his work was accomplished; he had the right to take a moment's rest. During the night he dreamed that he was at Brienne, playing with his little lead soldiers, and he distinctly saw one of them salute him in a military style and say:

"The emperor is very tired tonight."

The captain awoke, and, rubbing his eyes, saw that it was broad daylight. He arose, dressed and went out, dreamily murmuring:

"Emperor, emperor! Might it not be possible? Does the little lead soldier speak truly?"

Then he heard a tiny voice murmur at his side:

"The little lead soldier cannot be deceived."

He turned in the direction whence came the voice and saw, perched on a pebble, a tiny lead soldier saluting and looking at him steadily.

In the next instant the apparition vanished.

* * * * * * *

The pupil at Brienne, the captain at Toulon, Napoleon Bonaparte, is emperor. He has been crowned this very morning, and this evening he received the embassadors of other nations and the generals of the armies. He is exhausted.

Adjoining his superb reception room is a small cell furnished with a camp bed and one chair.

Disdaining the grand bed of state, he retires to his cell. There, at least, he can sleep.

He falls asleep.

And now in a dream he sees his lead soldier of old, who again murmurs:

"The emperor is very tired tonight."

The emperor starts. Then he asks:

"Who spoke?"

"I," says a weak voice.

"Who are you?"

"I have no name. I am a tiny lead soldier."

The emperor reflects a moment, then suddenly says:

"You have no name. Do you want one?"

"I do indeed, sire."

"Very well; you shall be called L'Etoile."

"Good, sire. What shall I be?"

"You will be a soldier in my old guard."

"I am pleased, sire, but what am I to do?"

"What are you to do?"

After a moment's reflection the emperor says:

"Fight, but say nothing."

"Sire," replies the lead soldier, "I will fight and never speak. But I wish to warn you that, when about to die, I shall speak once more, but for the last time. And I shall say to you, what I have always said, 'The emperor is very tired tonight.' When I shall have said that, I will be at the point of death and you about to be vanquished."

The soldier ceased speaking. The emperor slept on, but dreamed no more.

A few days after while reviewing his old guard the emperor remarked a new recruit. He wondered and asked who the soldier was.

"Why, you know him, sire; he brought me a line signed by your hand begging me to accept him in my regiment."

The emperor, upset, approached the soldier.

"So you are called L'Etoile?"

The soldier bowed his head as though to say yes.

"Why do you not say yes? You can speak."

The soldier shook his head, meaning no. The emperor remembered, and, as if dreaming, murmured:

"You are mute?"

The soldier bowed his head—yes. And the emperor passed on and once more asked himself if he were not dreaming.

The soldier, L'Etoile, fought like a lion on the battlefields. He could never be an officer, but he was made a chevalier of the order of the Legion of Honor and never was a cross more deservedly worn. Every time the emperor passed him he would say:

"Good day, L'Etoile."

And he would continue his way, happy to see L'Etoile still dumb, for he remembered the words of the little lead soldier.

"When I shall speak, I will be at the point of death and you about to be vanquished."

* * * * * * *

After victory, then defeat!

The emperor leaves for the island of Elba. He takes L'Etoile with him. L'Etoile is always mute.

The emperor thinks of returning to France. He returns. He has hardly landed before he sends for L'Etoile and speaks to him. L'Etoile remains silent.

And, confident, Napoleon crosses France and reascends his throne.

But now the allies begin to wage war against him. He, without being disconcerted, raises armies, fights every day; always brave, always defeated, but hopeful for the future, for L'Etoile has not yet spoken.

But in the midst of his losses Napoleon wonders if L'Etoile has not been false to him.

No; he has not been untrue.

* * * * * * *

Waterloo! Behold, Waterloo!

The battle is fierce. The last square alone now remains. The emperor, from an elevation, looks over the plain. With a fieldglass he looks for L'Etoile. And now he sees him. The grenadier is fighting desperately.

Suddenly he falls, struck by a bullet. The emperor, pale as a corpse, drops his glass and comes down.

L'Etoile is about to speak. Will he speak?

He imagines he will hear the voice of L'Etoile in his ear as he did at Brienne, and that he will see perched on a pebble by his side a tiny lead soldier.

The emperor neither hears nor sees anything.

His courage returns.

Who knows? Maybe everything is not yet over? L'Etoile may not be fatally wounded.

And with a confident air the emperor surveys the horizon.

The litters carried by ambulances now pass before him. They slowly and sadly wend their way by tens, twenties, thirties—

And suddenly in one of them the emperor recognizes L'Etoile.

Like a madman he dismounts, leaving his astonished marshals, and quickly reaches the wounded soldier, whom he finds pale and rigid as death.

"Poor L'Etoile!" said the emperor.

Then, addressing the surgeon:

"Did he speak?"

"No, sire, he is mute."

The emperor breathes again. But now he hears a broken voice coming from the corpse of L'Etoile:

"The emperor is very tired tonight," says the voice.

And for the first time in his life the emperor faints.

* * * * * * *

At St. Helena, Napoleon plays, as of yore, with his little lead soldiers. As before, he drills and leads them to imaginary victories.

He sometimes listens, hoping that one of them will speak, saluting him, as in the past, by the sweet name of emperor.

But the little lead soldiers are silent. Never again will they speak.

L'Etoile is dead. The emperor is fallen. The little lead soldiers will speak no more.—From the French For Chicago Times-Herald.

Looking to the Future.

"Yes," said the man who had been looking at some apartments in the big building, "it's very nice, but I don't see how I can take the place."

"What's the matter?" inquired the janitor.

"I observe by your printed rules that you don't keep the elevator running all night, and I must say I don't like the idea of walking up and down five or six flights of stairs every time my wife wants to know whether a burglar is trying to get into the cellar."—Washington Star.

ONE OF TWO WAYS.

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such is not liable to any form of disease except by by one of two ways. The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

Chief Cause.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief cause of bladder troubles. So the womb, like the bladder, was created for one purpose, and if not doctored too much is not liable to weakness or disease, except in rare cases. It is situated back of and very close to the bladder, therefore any pain, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or urinary passages is often, by mistake, attributed to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort. The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided. To find out correctly, set your urine aside for twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates kidnes or bladder trouble. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail. Mention the Index-Tribune and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.
